One Agent's Story

God and Man at the CIA

by Edward M. Whelan

What happens when a CIA agent trained in manipulation and deceit suddenly turns his life over to the Lord?

Jim Conway of Cleveland found out: As far as the United States government is concerned, God and international spying don't mix.

ONE HUMID NIGHT this summer—well past midnight—Jim Conway parked his car in the dark, empty lot of a large industrial corporation on the city's East Side. He quickly alighted and casually walked through the factory's unlocked side gate, easing his way unnoticed past television surveillance cameras.

Conway spent the next two hours in the company's administrative offices and in the warehouse detailing on scrap
